

Kimberly Marshall / Special to The Sun

Jane Anfinson shoots a scene for the new television shows on science at Arkansas State University in this undated photo.

SCIENCE: TV spots are spin-offs from newspaper articles, radio broadcasts

FROM PAGE A8

Buchanan and reproductive ecology of the flying squirrel by Dr. Tom Risch.

A special documentary on a field course on marine mammals offered by ASU and led by one of us is also being prepared.

These TV spots are spin-offs from both newspaper articles and radio shows being produced by the Department of Biological Sciences at Arkansas State. So far the department has produced nearly 100 articles that have been published on a weekly basis in The Sun and nearly 80 radio shows being broadcast also weekly by KASU and other regional radio stations.

All those articles and radio shows can also be viewed and heard at the Department of Biological Sciences Web site at: <http://biology.astate.edu/Outreach/outreach.htm>

For more information contact the ASU Department of Biological Sciences at biology@astate.edu.

Dr. Romero is chairman and professor at the Department of Biological Sciences and Ms. Anfinson is a master's of biology candidate at Arkansas State University.

The Sun
of Jonesboro, Ark.
 To Subscribe 870-935-5525