Dickmann said other communities such as Edwardsville have looked at "Ubú Roi" as a possible inspiration for planning their Comprehensive Plans, which are updated every 10 years. The plan is a document that sets goals and priorities for the city’s development and outlines direction for growth.

The Edwardsville city council approved a set of amendments to the city’s comprehensive plan that will allow new development in the city’s southern portion, in the area along Route 141, the beltway.

The amendments are part of the city’s 2010 Comprehensive Plan. The plan was adopted in 2010 and is a document that sets goals and priorities for the city’s development and outlines direction for growth.
