Museums have a very long history and are present in all corners of the planet as far as the eye can see. But they have also evolved in ways as exciting as the treasures that they hold, said Barnett.

“Some of the original locations were not so grand. Some of them were quite functional,” Barnett said. “I love our prune warehouse building, but it wasn’t the best of times. It was a bit of a challenge.”

Barnett said the university museum was moved to the building where they now are. It started in the basement, then a main floor, then moved to a third floor.

The museum was moved to the building on 19th and St. Louis, and Barnett said it was at the time a very large space. It was a two-story building with high ceilings and all the space that people needed and wanted. The building was spacious and had a lot of windows, which allowed natural light to come in.

Barnett said that the building was quite large and had a lot of space. It was a very nice building, but it was not the best of times. It was a bit of a challenge.
