Luo has achieved international recognition in the field of nonlinear dynamics with his theory of flow barrier vector fields. His collaborators have cited him with developing methods of calculating chaotic motion, as well as presenting theories of dynamic physical changes that were previously unexplored. In his own production, Luo's work in nonlinear dynamics has been published approximately 125 times in refereed journals. He has also published 12 research monographs and more than 50 pieces in proceedings, special issues, chapters and edited books. External funding from National Science Foundation and local industrial partners has been the most prominent of his contributions to research and creativity activities.

The award is an academic rank reward for contributions to research and creative activities. It is to be
