The United States has the highest rate of incarceration in the world, with about 7 million people incarcerated every day. The U.S. also has the largest number of drug offenders, who crowd jails and prisons. “The issue is so serious that it has come to the attention of the city,” explained Taylor. “We also execute a lot of people in the city and get drug convictions. That is why we hear even from conservative voices that we should legislate routinely in favor of non-violent drug offenders, because our prison system sometimes violates the Eighth Amendment, which prohibits cruel and unusual punishment,” explained Taylor. “There is an example of a case where drug offenders, who crossed prisons and pourquoi and who have never committed a violent crime, were executed by the state. There is no need to do something else than just throw people in jail.”

Dr. Morris Taylor

What factors lead to criminality? Poverty? Is it a lack of education, a lack of opportunity? “The issue is more complex,” said Taylor. “It has to do with the fact that our prison system sometimes violates the Eighth Amendment, which prohibits cruel and unusual punishment.”

This former teacher and jingle writer has come to the attention of the city. He said that they have created a serious problem in our community. But we have to try to change how people think,” Taylor said. “That is why it is important that we create an atmosphere that leads to the conclusion of what we do. Is there anything we can learn from that?”

In Europe, unlike in the United States, the police are not in charge of all law enforcement. Most of these countries have a different approach to the justice system. But what can be done to change things? “We need to create a new atmosphere that leads to the conclusion of what we do. Is there anything we can learn from that?”
