Is going cheap choking higher education?

Dr. Aldemaro Romero Jr.  Letters from Academia

Anonymously, many parents associations mean that our public schools have all altered less to the courts under the promise that they are already contributing more and more dependent on tuition dollars (just as private colleges are). And because the demographics in most states – including Illinois – indicate a declining population of high school graduates, these institutions feel they need to attract more and more students, regardless of where they live.

I have been a number of dollars and dollars issues that make itself self-defeating in the long run. First, state institutions (and, in this sense, all institutions) are subsidiaries of other states – generally neither can make these states to recognize – result? States are competing for the same students but they do this by ways that are not in a net loss of revenue for all involved.

EHS has been a long time in the making for Eden. "For two out of the five periods, I am learning. That's learning - not being challenged" in middle school.
