Their dry cleaning business began taking a turn for the worse around the time the nation's economy went south. It was around that time Ruby Burgess, a family member who owned the shop, began to notice something different about people coming into her shop. For one thing, there were fewer customers. She knew that was bad, but she didn't expect to see people looking in her windows and then suddenly disappear. She was surprised when her key to the side entrance was just sitting there on the counter. She picked it up and went inside to lock the door.

When Ruby arrived there to check things, she found that not only was the shop empty, but also the parking lot was empty. She looked around but didn't see anything wrong. She decided to just lock the door and go home.

As weeks went by, Ruby noticed something else about the shop. People started coming into the shop and then leaving without buying anything. She knew that was strange, but she didn't think too much of it at first.

Finally, one day something happened that made her realize what was going on. She was sitting in her car in the parking lot when a man walked over to her and said, “Hello, I'm fried and I'm hungry. Could you give me something to eat?” Ruby looked at him and saw that he was dressed in dirty clothes. It was clear to her that he needed help. She gave him some money and then went inside to lock the door.

Ruby went inside and found that the shop was empty again. She decided to close for the day and go home.

The next day when Ruby arrived at work, she found that the shop was still empty. She knew that something was wrong, but she didn't know what it was. She asked her daughter if she knew what was going on, but her daughter didn't know either. She decided to go inside and find out what was happening.

When Ruby got inside, she found that someone had been in the shop. There were clothes missing and some things had been taken. She called the police and then went home to wait for them.

The police arrived and took a look around the shop.
They found some clothes missing and some things had been taken. They asked Ruby what had been taken and she told them. They took notes and then left.

Ruby was really upset by what had happened. She didn't know what to do. She decided to call her daughter and see if she knew what to do. Her daughter didn't know either. She decided to just wait and see what happened. She knew that she had to do something to get her shop back in order.

someone had been in again. There were more clothes missing and some things had been taken. She called the police again and they came and took a look around.
