One of the highest hyphens in the history of the high school English language!

The idea of Massive Open Online Courses was pioneered by two Stanford University professors. They had announced that by using Internet-based technology, the classroom could be expanded to serve an entire world. The possibilities were so exciting that the idea quickly spread across the United States and other parts of the world.

Since 2002, over 1,300 teachers have traveled to Germany as TOP fellows. The trip provided a view into today's Germany that American educators had never seen before. Throughout the two-week trip, the TOPs group visited Munich, Stuttgart, and other cities to experience German culture, history, and current events.

Koester explained that his tour group of 15 teachers began in Munich, where they visited some cultural sites before visiting Kaufbeuren, a small town in southern Germany. The group then visited Munich again to do a couple of weeks in school and then you go work in whichever business you are interested in that business. The program allows for work, travel, and study over three years. The main difference is that you have to pay for the classes that are a part of Germany's educational system and learn about what the department does for the city administration, a place where they recog- nized the complexity of St. Louis.

Koester said that a huge highlight for him was meeting Oliver Bientzle, a Deputy Director working in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Koester said that a huge highlight for him was meeting Oliver Bientzle, a Deputy Director working in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Koester said that a huge highlight for him was meeting Oliver Bientzle, a Deputy Director working in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Koester explained that the TOPs group visited Kaufbeuren, a small town in southern Germany, where they learned about the dual system of apprenticeship. He said that a huge highlight for him was meeting Oliver Bientzle, a Deputy Director working in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Koester explained that the TOPs group visited Kaufbeuren, a small town in southern Germany, where they learned about the dual system of apprenticeship. He said that a huge highlight for him was meeting Oliver Bientzle, a Deputy Director working in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Koester explained that the TOPs group visited Kaufbeuren, a small town in southern Germany, where they learned about the dual system of apprenticeship. He said that a huge highlight for him was meeting Oliver Bientzle, a Deputy Director working in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.