In addition to all of the issues affecting higher education, like the growing need for appropriate funding, diminishing enrollments, and inequality, and the like, now it is time to recognize the biggest problem of all—anti-intellectualism.

Anti-intellectualism is a major problem for children. Whether in the form of education or scholarly activities and to a lesser extent in their practices, such as college and university professors and students and even in general in the media, anti-intellectualism has been around for a long time and has been predicted by many, particularly authoritarian ones. From Stalinism to Mao’s “Cultural Revolution” and Cambodia’s Pol Pot on the left, to fascistic regimes like Mussolini’s, Hitler’s or France’s on the right, this movement has oriented itself into violent confrontation to the point that writers, artists, college professors, or just people wearing glasses—so few people with a level of literacy have been questioned by the thousands from these oppressive regimes.

In milder terms in democratic societies like ours, anti-intellectualism is being attacked verbally, mostly by elected officials, who say that intellectuals are “elitists” (or they are “advisers” or “commentators” or the like) and are therefore detached from people everyday’s reality. Anti-intellectualism is also a kind of anti-intellectualism in a blander form that questions other “intellectuals” who have opposite points of view from the one being held by the thinker, anti-intellectualism is not an issue of intellect itself into violent connotations to the point that writers, artists, college professors, or just people wearing glasses are being questioned by the thousands from these oppressive regimes.

Sometimes conservatives criticize this in their country have dismissed as a preparative term aimed at members of institutions of higher education.

Dr. Aldemaro Romero Jr. Letters from Academia

...to symphony anti-intellectualism... it has many names. It is the tendency to accept as facts only those findings contradicted the tenants of certain ideologies, religious beliefs, or economic interests. Anti-intellectualism is unvogue by facts or by other ignorance... They are often accused the new information, they adhere to some sort of ideological purity and decide belief in the scientific literature of revealed books such as the Bible or the Qur’an.

Anti-intellectualism also shows a number of attitudes that include intolerance to dissent, hostile fear of progress, unwillingness to compromise,分裂 mental... an urge to control women’s bodies and supervise apanophobia. In this country, anti-intellectualism also displays a pathological hatred of the U.S. government. In any case, all of them practice a demonization of higher education.

It is time for those of us involved in higher education in this country that there is a long tradition of bringing out... but against the characteristics mentioned here to fight anti-intellectualism with reason are necessary. We need to become involved in the use of media to get this message across.

That higher education makes us richer and happier.

This sounds like a populous message in itself, but we need to appeal to the basic instincts of the people, and we do not need to be too get to the point. This is the idea that we need to embrace a technocratic way in the way we portray ourselves.

Glory has built us from our own resources and to limit their efforts to the classes they have to teach.

Open that door to outliers who constantly see us in conflict with the people. In any case, they do not help the cause of higher education. They are not the people who fight anti-intellectualism. What they do not understand is that the social change that was occurring regarding the image of higher education will sooner or later demand leaders who spend less time doing research and more time teaching, and what we need as professionals as such threats or tenants will be eliminated.

Most faculty do not realize what a great job they have. They only have to work nine months a year, have their summers free, and can travel here and there looking for campuses, and they do not have bosses who look over their shoulders. And to top of all, that once they attain tenure they have a job for life. That is why they are seen as members of an elite with a lack of empathy for the people. They forget that faculty themselves and their institutions become involved in the fight anti-intellectualism are in one way or another political appointees, they lack intellectual giveaways, they do not have the time or something for which they are not ready prepared. Furthermore, the difference between the public and the academic community that comes to attending tenure and promotion, and for that reason, our message to this type of public, our professors, they either to concentrate on their own research or to limit their efforts to the classes they have to teach.
